HAGENBECK-WALLACE CIRCUS NOVEMBER 10th

Wished to Save Goldie Locks. Marian was going over her reading lesson, which was the story of the three bears, relates the Boston Globe. "Goldie Locks jumped out of the window," she read.

"Now, Marian," interrupted her mother, "you know the book does not say that. Be careful when you read. The book says, 'Goldie Locks jumped out of bed.'"

"I know, mamma," explained Marian, "but I wanted her to jump far enough to get away from the three bears."

Fruit and wine stains, if reasonably fresh, may be removed by pouring boiling water through them; if this does not succeed, wet the spot and hold it over sulphur fumes. Sulphurous acid, a bleaching agent, will be formed. Washing in a dilute solution of peroxide of hydrogen will also bleach such spots.

Another way is to mix sift soap and powdered starch with half the quantity of salt and the juice of a lemon. Lay the mixture out on a brush and let the linen lie out on the grass for a few frosty nights and the stain will soon disappear.

A Little Church History

(By Dr. J. L. Murphy.)
The prefix of the word "German" in connection with the Reformed church in a recent church notice furnishes the occasion for this note. Not that this particular "prefix" was offensive to our church, but because of the simple plain fact that our's is not the German Reformed church of America. The prefix German implies that the German language is used in that congregation, which is not the case in this instance. If one of the kaiser's subjects had spent the night with our good friend, W. P. Huffman at the Huffry last Saturday night and read that services were to be conducted in the German Reformed church and when attending that church found that not one present could speak the German language, his thoughts would have had to be rearranged for they would have been fit for pulp use. It is true that formerly the official title of our church was the German Reformed church, but that has been changed and the official title is "The Reformed Church in the United States" just as we have the Reformed church of France, of Holland, and other countries. It is interesting to note how denominations receive their names. Protestant denominations are usually named in one of these ways. (a)—After some man—the founder of that denomination. (b)—After some form of church government. (c)—After some special doctrine. As an example of the first we have the Lutheran church, of the second we have the Congregational and Presbyterian churches, of the third we have the Baptist church. But this is not true with the Reformed church.

After the Marburg conference Luther and Zwingli separated and those following Luther were called Lutherans, those following Zwingli were called Zwinglians, but to this Zwingli objected that a church should be called after him, but the church of the living God, reformed from the corrupt practices which had crept into it through Roman practices. For a time his followers were known as the church reformed, and finally it became the Reformed church.

From the Reformed of the Sixteenth Century there emerged two distinct branches of Protestantism which Doctor Schaff designates as Lutheran and Reformed. In the broadest sense the Reformed church embraces all Protestant denominations which are not Lutheran and Anabaptist. In Holland it is organized as the Dutch Reformed church in Germany the German Reformed church, in France the Huguenots, in Scotland the Presbyterian, in the United States it is "The Reformed Church in the United States and the Reformed church in the United States of America. However, the word "Reformed" is so comprehensive that it does not convey a very definite idea to the person seeking information concerning one particular branch of the church. It is a word capable of various applications. For an example how this word may be applied and how it was applied once upon a time, I refer the reader to my good friend and our esteemed townsman, Major Lee Latta.

Cut disks of screen wire for waste pipes and fit them into the bathtub and basin, placing them near the top of the overflow holes so that they may be lifted out with a sutton hook and cleaned. When the disks are broken new ones should be cut, as screen wire is neither expensive nor hard to handle. The method will be found in the "ounce of prevention" as it will stop waste from getting into the pipes.

CAUSE OF DECAY IN WATERMELONS FOUND

Washington, D. C., Oct. 11.—The principal cause of the deterioration of watermelons in transit from south Georgia to northern markets has been found by the department of agriculture to be a fungus which produces a stem-end rot. The numerous complaints of heavy losses from this cause during recent years, which led the department to investigate the subject, have been that cars shipped in apparently good condition arrived at destination with a large percentage of the melons decayed.

This injury was variously attributed to the presence of lime, fertilizers, or other chemicals on the sides and floors of the cars, though by some it was believed to be due to rough handling and varietal or cultural defects.

A special study was made to determine what, if any, effect the presence of chemical fertilizers might have on the decay in melons.

The conclusions reached were that only a small part of the trouble may be attributed to imperfect cleaning of cars that have been previously used for the shipment of fertilizers or other materials and that some improvements may be made in growing and handling the melons, but that 90 per cent of the losses from decay in transit during the past season resulted from the infection of the stem ends of the melons by a decay-producing fungus called diplopia.

This is related to fungi which cause similar injuries to citrus fruits, sweet potatoes and to cotton bolls. It apparently infects the cut stems, or possibly is present in the vines, and the problem of control must be worked out on the farms rather than in the railway cars.

Another type of injury to watermelons and cantaloupes, very prevalent this year, takes the form of pitted decayed spots scattered over the fruit. This is the anthracnose, a fungus trouble which also originates in the field where it attacks the foliage as well as the fruit. Thorough spraying with Bordeaux mixture is the remedy in this case.

The Judge Was on Both Sides
Judge Sulzberger very sensibly holds to the English opinion that it is a court's duty to get justice even if the judge himself has to interfere with the contending lawyers, says the Philadelphia Public Ledger. If the judge can throw light upon some dark spot in a case he should do it and not permit lawyers to obscure the right in order to win.

This Philadelphia judge who, unfortunately, will soon leave the bench, enjoys a wide reputation for what lawyers call "butting in." To illustrate, I shall repeat the conversation I heard at a dinner table.

"Who tried it?" somebody asked. "Well," said Lawyer A, "I appeared for the plaintiff, but Judge Sulzberger tried the case."

"Who was on the other side?" queried someone else. "Lawyer B won for the defendant, but Judge Sulzberger also tried his case."

When I reported that dialogue to Judge Sulzberger, quick as a flash came this: "It is the duty of the court to appoint counsel where there is none."

An open foe may prove a curse. But a pretended friend is worse. —Gray.

ADVERTISING PAYS

Advertising in the Record pays. All the merchants say so, but the Abernethy Hardware Company insists that it does. This firm sold six South Bend Malleable Steel Ranges last week on the strength of an advertisement in the Record, and got a large number of people thinking of these stoves. The demonstration will continue through tomorrow.

GET'S PART OF BIG LOAN

Spartanburg, Oct. 9.—It was announced that the Security Trust Company of this city has been allotted $100,000 of the Anglo-French loan through W. S. Leach & Co., of New York, members of the underwriting syndicate. W. S. Glenn of Spartanburg is president of the Security Trust Company. J. B. Lee, vice president and J. W. Simpson, secretary. The company offered to take $200,000 of the loan but secured only half of its subscription.

UNIVERSITY DAY TO BE OBSERVED HERE

University Day Tuesday will be observed in Hickory with a gathering of alumni from all over the county in the dining room of a local cafe. The affair will be informal, owing to the absence of the president of the local association and the lack of time in preparing for it. Messrs. Busson Blackwelder and Roy Abernethy have taken the question up and are making plans for the observance. There are nearly fifty Carolina men in Catawba county, and it is proposed to organize thoroughly and pull off a big stunt Christmas or next October. In the meantime the local chapter will let the authorities at Chapel Hill know that the "old boys" are with them in their good work.
